Introduction

The Proper Chants of the Mass

This publication contains a substantial portion of the proper chants of the Mass of the Roman rite (introits, graduals, alleluias, tracts, offertories, and communions) adapted to English words.¹

The introits are intended to accompany the entrance of the ministers. The graduals, alleluias, and tracts are intended to be used in the Liturgy of the Word. The offertories are intended to accompany the collection of the people's offerings and the preparation of the gifts, and the communions are intended to accompany the ministration of Holy Communion.

At all these points in the liturgy the Episcopal Church's Book of Common Prayer (1979) permits the singing of hymns, psalms, or anthems.

While it is true that in the Roman Catholic Church vernacular translations of Latin liturgical texts that have not been officially ¹The American Gradual 2020 is issued in two editions: a modern notation edition and a conventional chant (four-line staff) notation edition. Both editions will be issued in two volumes, the first containing the the introits, offertories, and communions (the chants most widely used); the second containing the graduals, alleluias, and tracts.

authorized may not be used, and no officially authorized translations of the texts in the Graduale Romanum exist, the General Instruction of the Roman Missal states that other suitable songs may be used in place of the introits, offertories, and communions; and English-language adaptations of the Latin introits, offertories, and communions certainly qualify as suitable songs. It does not, on the other hand, authorize the use of other suitable songs in place of the graduals, alleluias, and tracts. So when these are used in place of the responsorial psalms and acclamations appointed in the Lectionary for Mass, they must be sung in Latin.

Why Sing These Chants?

Their musical merit is widely acknowledged. The vast majority of their texts are drawn from scripture and are suitable for the occasions to which they are assigned. Although they must usually be sung by trained singers, the number required to sing them is small. When they are the only choral music sung, they provide more-than-adequate fare for churches with limited resources; and when they are combined with a large and varied choral repertory, they provide significant enrichment.

The texts of the chants assigned to a particular day are often related to the assigned readings. After the revision of the Roman Rite calendar and lectionary that followed Vatican II, the Vatican re-assigned the proper chants of the Mass, publishing the new assignments in the Ordo Cantus Missae (1972). Because the Episcopal Church in revisions of its own calendar and lectionary has adhered quite closely to the Roman model, the same chants may on most days may be sung in both the Episcopal Church and the Roman Catholic Church.

Why Sing the Chants in English?

In some churches choral music is frequently sung in Latin at services that are otherwise conducted entirely in English. For over four hundred years Anglican authorities were firm in their insistence that everything sung in the liturgy be “understood of the people,” and in the years immediately following Vatican II many Roman Catholic authorities were adamant in their insistence that everything sung in the liturgy be sung in the vernacular. During the past forty years opposition to singing in Latin at English services has gradually yielded to recognition that the texture of some choral works makes their words unintelligible to listeners, regardless of the language in which they are sung, and that much fine choral music cannot be satisfactorily adapted to English words. Nevertheless, the arguments that justify the singing of other kinds of choral music in Latin at English services do not, for the most part, apply to chant.

When chant is sung in English, listeners who understand English can understand the words. To concede that special considerations may sometimes outweigh a general preference for language understood by the people is not to discredit this preference altogether. What is called “Gregorian” chant (Romano-Frankish chant) was devised as a vehicle for meditation upon scriptural texts.² Hearing a text and immediately understanding its meaning is far more conducive to such meditation than reading a translation of that text from a service leaflet.

Adapting Chant to English Words

No one at all acquainted with the Latin chant repertory will argue that chant melodies cannot be satisfactorily adapted to more than one set of Latin words. A huge part of that repertory is the product of such adaptation. Type melodies like those associated with the antiphon Lumen ad revelationem,³ the gradual Iustus ut palma,⁴ and the Alleluia verse Dies sanctificatus,⁵ have been adapted to numerous Latin texts, undergoing significant permutations but remaining clearly recognizable in the process. Original melodies composed for particular texts have also been adapted to other Latin texts, both in the era when the authentic Gregorian repertory was developing and in more recent times. The adaptation of the melody of the offertory chant Stetit angelus to the text of *Iustorum animae*⁶ stands as an example from the middle ages. Joseph Pothier's adaptation of the melody of the introit Vocem iucunditatis to the text of the introit Gaudens gaudebo stands as an example from the late-nineteenth or early-twentieth century.

Some chant scholars have denied that chant melodies can ever be adapted to texts in any language other than Latin. They have based their stand on the relationship between the chant and the rhythms of Latin prose. That relationship is undeniable. The rhythms of English prose, however, do not differ so significantly from the rhythms of Latin prose as to preclude satisfactory adaptation of chant melodies to English words.

André Mocquereau of Solesmes,⁷ whose views held wide sway

⁴A tabular analysis of the adaptation of this melody to numerous Latin texts, with commentary, appears in Ferretti, op. cit. 170-189.

⁵A tabular analysis of the adaptation of this melody to numerous Latin texts, with commentary, appears in Ferretti, op. cit., 200-206.

⁶See J. Gajard, "L'offertoire de la Toussaint," Revue grégorienne, 26, no. 5 (septembre-octobre 1947), 179-185.

⁷Mocquereau devised the "Solesmes Method" of chant interpretation, long abandoned by the monks of Solesmes. Daniel Saulnier has described it as "a during most of the twentieth century, maintained that satisfactory adaptation of chant to other languages was impossible because the Latin language in the golden age of chant composition had a pitch accent, whereas English and most other modern European languages had a stress accent. He maintained, in other words, that the rhythms of Latin prose during the period in question were not based on intensity. His position finds no support among linguists, who generally agree that by the fourth century—long before the composition of the Gregorian repertory—the Latin accent had evolved from a pitch accent to a stress accent.⁸

Although successful adaptation of chant to English words is possible, not all adaptations have been successful. Poor ones abound. They are usually the work of adapters who have simply strung English words under melodies devised to fit Latin words, without regard for the basic principles of chant composition. Satisfactory adaptations result only from employment of the techniques used by the medieval adapters, who altered melodies wherever necessary to preserve in their adaptations the relationship between text and music that obtained in their sources. I have endeavored to do so in all my work.

Certain characteristics of English require special accommodation. “Accents of isolation” are widely used in Latin chant. In these the accented syllable is placed on a single-note neume, and the following unstressed syllable is placed on a melisma that follows it. When the chant is sung in Latin, these melismas can be sung beautifully because every Latin syllable, stressed or un-rhythmic theory of Gregorian chant (based on the views propounded in Le Nombre musical grégorien), which has long since been demonstrated to be obsolete.”

⁸See, for example, L.R. Palmer, The Latin Language, (London: Faber & Faber, 1954), who wrote, “For the period after 300 A.D. there is general agreement among scholars that a stress accent characterized Latin.” (page 214). Whether Latin ever had a pitch accent remains open to question. See W. Sidney Allen, Vox Latina (Cambridge [England]: Cambridge University Press, 1978), 83-88.

stressed, has a full vowel sound. Unstressed English syllable often do not. They have in place of a pure vowel a schwa or vowel murmur, represented in most dictionaries by an inverted “e” and pronounced like “uh.” The vowel murmur cannot tolerably bear the musical weight of a melisma. In many cases where the accent of isolation is used, the melisma must be moved to the accented syllable, and a note must be added for the following unstressed syllable.

The final cadences of most of the psalm tones used with the introits and communions are cursive formulas, in which the last five syllables of the text, irrespective of its accentuation, are set to the last five neumes.⁹ To modern ears even Latin texts sound strange when set this way. When English texts are set to these formulas, and unstressed syllables lacking vowel sounds are given more musical weight than they can sustain, texts are grossly distorted. Consequently, I have altered some of these cadences, transforming those of tones 1 and 7 into accentual formulas and shortening the first neume in the cadences of tones 3 and 8.

Choice of Melodic Readings on Which to Base Adaptations

The production of the Vatican edition of the Graduale Romanum was an extraordinary achievement. In many respects the melodic readings adopted in it have stood the test of time. Regrettably, its editor, Dom Joseph Pothier,¹⁰ failed to reverse certain changes in ⁹For an explanation of why these cadences were composed this way, see Eugène Cardine, Beginning Studies in Gregorian Chant. tr. William Tortolano (Chicago: GIA Publications, 1988), 57-59.

¹⁰Although Pius X appointed a commission to produce the Vatican edition of the chant, this commission met only a few times. Pothier did most of the work single-handedly. See John Boe, The Ordinary in English. (Thesis. Ph.D. Northwestern University, 1969), vol. 1, 274 ff.

the melodies that had been introduced with the advent of polyphony in the late Middle Ages. To forestall the incidence of the augmented fourth,¹¹ the medieval editors had raised what were formerly E's to F's and raised what were formerly B's to C's. In some cases the changes that they made obscured the tonality of the chants. In others they led to conflict between the text and music. For example, in the introit Resurrexi the original melody for "manum tuam" accords with the accentuation of the text:

In the Vatican edition, however, Pothier adopted the modified version of the phrase, in which the melody and the accentuation of the text are in conflict.

Examples like this are numerous,¹² and I have restored the earlier form wherever I have encountered this corruption in the Vatican edition.

I nevertheless reject the idea that the earliest form of a chant is always to be preferred to later forms. This idea rests on the assumption that the earliest versions of a chant were never patient of improvement. So I have not always adopted the editorially-restored versions of the melodies presented in the Graduale novum.¹³

¹¹The augmented fourth was called the “diabolus in musica.”

¹²For other examples see Paolo Ferretti, op. cit., 53-56.

¹³[Rome?]: Libreria Editrice Vaticana, 2011). This is not an official revision of the Vatican ed.

Choice of Translations

I have drawn Psalm texts largely from the 1979 Prayer Book Psalter and have drawn other scriptural texts from the Revised Standard Version of the Bible, but I have occasionally altered them, as when small changes facilitated adaptation of the music to them, or when their meaning differed significantly from the meaning of the corresponding Latin texts, and the Latin texts had special liturgical relevance.

Semiology and Interpretation

Eugène Cardine's comparative study of the neumes found in oldest adiastematic¹⁴ manuscripts led him to an evidence-based understanding about the way in which these neumes were to be interpreted.¹⁵ His close associate Jean Claire, the man to whom he dictated his final testament, stated, however, that the prevailing interpretation of Cardine's teaching was erroneous. He wrote that Cardine had never heard a chant recording purportedly based on his teaching that he found satisfactory because in them all his differentiation of note values had been exaggerated. Claire wrote:

Practically everyone has wished to be a disciple of Dom Cardine. Everyone has wished to "do" the cuts—all the cuts; to sing according to the "three values"—all the "values"; to execute each neume—every neume—according to its proper nature, revised and corrected;¹⁶

¹⁴These manuscripts lacked staff lines, and their neumes did not show exact pitches. They did, however, convey interpretative nuances missing in the later manuscripts that did show exact pitches.

¹⁵For these interpretations see Eugène Cardine, Gregorian semiology, tr. Robert M. Fowells (Sablé-sur-Sarthe, France: Abbaye Saint-Pierre de Solesmes, 1982).

¹⁶Cardine used the word "neume" in reference to the notes (or single note) to which a syllable is set. He distinguished neumes from the neumatic elements composing a compound neume.

to observe the repercussions completely—all the repercussions, etc. And this has resulted most often only in a dryness, a coldness, an indescribable inexpressiveness...¹⁷

It will also be good to take a dispassionate account of the difference between the value of an average syllable and that of a note within a melisma, which corresponds exactly to the difference between the time required to pronounce correctly an average syllable (consonant plus vowel) and the time required to pronounce a syllable consisting of a vowel alone. If an electronic technician is available in one's group, one should ask him to calculate the difference, that is, to give in fractions of a second, the time it takes to articulate an average syllable and then try to listen to recordings—it matters not how many—with semiological pretensions “according to the works of D. Cardine” without smiling a little. All this is said in his testament.¹⁸

Claire went on to write about Cardine's ideas about the execution of repercussions.

Finally, the repercussions. This is the domain where it is easiest, with the best intentions in the world, to compromise everything. The repercussion must not interrupt the sound but instead modulate it delicately. It must not chop up the word or interrupt the line of the phrase. Such an execution is undoubtedly beyond the ability of all the voices in the choir, but it is not necessary that such a nuance should be rendered by ¹⁷Jean Claire, “Dom Eugène Cardine (1905-1988), Revue grégorienne XXIII, (1989), 20. My translation.

¹⁸Claire, op.cit., 23. Boldface added.

the voices that are insufficiently supple. Those who are able should add a discreet vibrato over the sound of the ensemble, and the desired effect will be produced.¹⁹

In editing the new Liber hymnarius the monks of Solesmes made extensive use of the horizontal episema. They discovered that choirs were exaggerating what was supposed to be a nuance. So in editing the new Antiphonale monasticum and the new Antiphonale romanum they abandoned its use altogether. In his introduction to the Antiphonale monasticum Daniel Saulnier wrote,²⁰

It has become customary to use this term [“rhythmic signs”] for three signs added by the Solesmes editions to XX century books of chant: the dot, the vertical episema and the horizontal episema. These three signs have been abandoned in our edition for the following reasons: The dot and the vertical episema do not correspond to any traditional information about Gregorian chant. They do not appear in any medieval manuscripts and have only been introduced into Solesmes editions in order to promote a rhythmic theory of Gregorian chant (based on the views propounded in Le Nombre musical grégorien), which has long since been demonstrated to be obsolete. Moreover, they have shown themselves to be in contradiction with the elementary principles of reading medieval neumes. More precisely, this rhythmic theory, to the extent that it inflicts a rhythmic distortion on the words and phrases that are chanted, appears in contradiction to the elementary principles of liturgical music composition, which must be set fundamentally at the service of the sacred text. The horizontal episema only appears in two or three medieval manuscripts of the office out of several hundred documents which have come down to us.²¹ It is not a rhythmic sign, but an expressive one. It does not inform the singer about basic rhythm, it only indicates—and that in a way very ambiguous for XX century singers—a minute nuance of rhythm (called agogic by musicians for the last century). Most amateur choirs are incapable of producing such subtle nuances,²² which are the preserve of experienced soloists, and the exaggerated interpretation they give to them leads them in the end to distort the underlying rhythm of such simple Gregorian pieces as antiphons, a rhythm based on the declamation of the text and the flow of the melody.

The Conventional Chant Notation (Four-line Staff Notation) Edition of This Work

Since the publication of the first edition of this work in 2001, several church musicians have expressed their desire for a conventional chant notation edition. With the Illuminare Score Editor I have been able to typeset the chants in this notation without expending an unreasonable amount of time. Arranging my files for publication in a book was, however, a challenge that I could meet only with the help of Felipe Gasper of Toronto, Ontario, who has arranged them in a beautiful format. To him I am immeasurably grateful.

²¹The horizontal episema does appear frequently in manuscripts of the Mass propers, but is not reproduced here because it is generally misinterpreted.

²²Boldface added. Experience has convinced me that professional church choirs having little time to rehearse the chant cannot do so, either.

I have tried to make this conventional chant edition useful to choirs that endeavor to render all the nuances shown in the adiastematic manuscripts as well as to those that follow prevalent performance practice with little or no change based on semiology.

I have used the following note forms not found in the Vatican edition: The oriscus, the salicus, the pes quassus, the bivirga and trivirga, and the strophæ. With these note forms in use singers who attempt to execute all the nuances shown in the Laon and St. Gall manuscripts will need only to add the horizontal episema to the clivis-with-episema and the long torculus. Marking these may even prove unnecessary at cadences because a normal retard achieves their intended effect.

I have not used signs of liquescence. These were not used consistently in the manuscripts—only at points where the scribes believed singers needed reminders to pronounce the consonants carefully. The high incidence of consonantal “pileups” in English would have required such extensive use of them as would make them pointless.

Choirs that adhere to prevailing performance practice, attempting to render only a few of the nuances conveyed in the adiastematic neumes, will continue to ignore most differences in note shapes. I urge them, however, to depart from past practice by executing the repercussions as Claire suggests, (v.s.) and by giving added weight to the note following the quilisma, to the top note of the salicus:  formerly and to the top note of the newly-differentiated pes quassus:

e glory in your cross. O Lord, and praise and glo-ri-fy your ho-ly res-urrec-tion, for by virtue of the cross joy has come to the whole world. Ps. May God be merciful to us and bless us, show us the light of his countenance and come to us. Let your ways be known upon earth, your saving health among all nations. Let the peoples praise you, O God; let all the peoples praise you.

The Reproaches

Two cantors sing:

O

my people, what have I done to you? or how have I offended you? Tes-ti-fy against me.

Because I led you forth from the land of Egypt,

you have prepared a cross for your Savior.

The first choir sings:

Ha-gi-os o Theos.

The second choir responds:

Ho- ly God.

First choir:

Ha-gi-os Ischyros.

Second choir:

Ho- ly and might- y.

First choir:

Ha-gi- os Athana- tos e- le- i- son hymas.

Second choir:

Ho- ly Im-mor-tal One, have mer- cy up-on us.

Then one or two cantors from the second choir sing:

Because I led you forth through the des- ert for-ty years and fed you with man- na, and brought you in-to a good and bounteous land, you have prepared a cross for your Savior.

The first choir sings:

Ha-gi- os o Theos.

The second choir responds:

Ho- ly God.

First choir:

Ha-gi-os Ischyros.

Second choir:

Ho- ly and might- y.

First choir:

Ha- gi- os Athana- tos e- le- i- son hy-

mas.

Second choir:

Ho- ly Immortal One, have mer- cy up-on

us.

The first choir cantor(s) sing

What more could I have done for you that I have not done? Indeed I plant-ed you, O my chosen vineyard with fair fruit, but you have become ve-ry bit-ter to me; when I was thirstty, you gave me vin-e-gar to drink, and with a spear you have pierced the side of your Savior.

The first choir sings:

Ha-gi- os o Theos.

The second choir responds:

Ho- ly God.

First choir:

Ha-gi-os Ischyros.

Second choir:

Ho- ly and might- y.

First choir:

Ha- gi- os Athana- tos e- le- i- son hy-

mas.

Second choir:

Ho- ly Immortal One, have mer- cy up-on

us.

The second choir cantor(s) sing:

I scourged Egypt with her firstborn for your sake, and you have scourged me and de-livered me up.

Here and after each of the following verses both choirs together respond:

O my people, what have I done to you? or how have I offended you? Tes-ti-fy against me. Because I led you forth from the land of Egypt, you have prepared a cross for your Savior.

First choir cantor(s):

I led you out of Egypt, drowning Pharaoh in the Red Sea, and you have de-livered me to the chief priests.

Second choir cantor(s):

I opened the sea be fore you, and you have opened my side with a spear.

First choir cantor(s):

I went before you in a pillar of cloud, and you have led me to the judgement hall of Pi-late.

Second choir cantor(s):

I fed you with manna in the des-ert, and you have smitten me with blows and scourg- es.

First choir cantor(s):

I gave you the water of salvation from the rock to drink, and for drink you have given me vinegar and gall.

Second choir cantor(s):

I struck down the kings of the of Canaanites for your sake, and you have struck my head with a reed.

First choir cantor(s):

I gave you a royal scepter, and you have given me a crown of thorns.

Second choir cantor(s):

I raised you on high with great power, and you have hanged me on the gibbet of the cross.
